

The Sun's rays enter the Earth's atmosphere as light and heat energy.

Some of the heat escapes.

Some of the heat is reflected from the Earth's surface.

Some of the heat gets absorbed by the greenhouse gases in the atmosphere.

The Earth gets hotter as a result.